

101 Recommendations to Revitalize Michigan

This report is a compendium of work authored by Mackinac Center policy analysts and compiled by Senior Legislative Analyst Jack McHugh

Michigan is blessed with a wealth of the human and natural resources integral to building vibrant commerce and vigorous communities in the 21st century. At the moment, however, counter-productive public policies have made it harder for our industries to compete nationally and internationally and have reduced our state's attractiveness to investors and entrepreneurs.

In addition, Michigan is not immune to the gradual erosion of equity and basic human freedom that accompanies a steady growth in the power and scope of government. Related to this, our government's ability to properly perform many critical functions, including education, has been jeopardized by policymakers' attempts to do too many things. This lack of focus has even led to confusion among policymakers over whether government exists to serve the people or vice versa.

There's a lot of work to do to reverse this, but there's good news. Once growth- and freedom-friendly policies are in place, recovery is likely to occur much more quickly than most people imagine.

For policymakers and voters serious about restoring freedom and economic vitality in the Great Lakes State, the Mackinac Center presents the following 101 recommendations.

Table of contents

---

- 1 Government operations and spending
- 3 Taxes
- 3 Environmental laws and regulations
- 4 Other regulations

For the sake of brevity, each recommendation is made in a single sentence. Inevitably, such a brief description omits some nuance and detail. Such distinctions are provided more fully, however, in the articles found at the Web addresses accompanying each recommendation and in other publications at www.mackinac.org, the Mackinac Center's Web site.
